

PUSS IN BOOTS

For the third year running Doxey's thespians have achieved great success. The first night of this year's pantomime – Puss in Boots – was a sell-out. The remaining performances are expected to play to full houses, too.

Many of the cast from last year's pantomime were there again – some in bigger roles – but there were about a dozen newcomers, too. In this way the pantomime achieved one of its aims of drawing more people – young and old - into the life of the community.

The performance itself was greatly enjoyed by the audience. The enthusiasm of the actors was infectious and the audience made its traditional contributions, especially when the villain made his entries.

At the end, people went home having had a good evening's entertainment and Doxey was enriched by this event.
